The Fund's return assumes the reinvestment of dividend and capital gain distributions. For the period reported, some of the Fund's fees were waived or expenses reimbursed; otherwise, total return would have been lower. The Russell 2000 Growth Index measures the performance of the small-cap growth segment of the U.S. equity universe. It includes those Russell 2000 companies with higher price-to-book ratios and higher forecasted growth values. ¹The average market capitalization used in the table is a weighted average and is determined by taking the average of each stock's percentage weight. Generally speaking, small-cap stocks have market values below $1 billion. ²Price-to-earnings ratio is the value of a company's stock price relative to company earnings. ³Beta is the measure of a fund's relative volatility as compared to an index. The beta of the Fund and Index are each measured against the Russell 3000, which is comprised of the largest 3000 U.S. companies, representing approximately 98% of the investable U.S. equity market. ⁴A fund with a 1.10 beta is expected to perform 10% better than the Index in up markets and 10% worse in down markets. Generally speaking, the higher the beta, the riskier the investment. Alpha is the difference between a fund's actual returns and its expected performance, given its level of risk as measured by Beta. The difference is expressed as an annualized percentage. ⁵EPS is earnings per share. ⁶This measurement is not a forecast of the Fund's performance.
